

This picture shows a corneal ulcer which can be associated with blepharitis. Note the white patch on the cornea (blue arrow). The eye tends to be much more red.

This would be increasingly painful and light sensitive for the patient. This is called a 'Marginal Keratitis'